Good Judgment?

Editor of the Daily News:

I don't know where Mr. Seven-Month Resident of Greensboro (Public Pulse, Feb. 8) is from or how he is judging the caliber of Greensboro in comparison with other cities, except that everything about Greensboro seems to have gone to please him up to a point—and that point is, as he says, "I saw what the majority of the people of Greensboro is really like."

Notwithstanding the circumstances and the small number of people under his observance he quickly came to the conclusion that Greensboro isn't a city of such high caliber after all. He asks the question: Is Greensboro proud of herself and all this quick reversal of opinion based on something that has come upon Greensboro like a sudden storm?

Without waiting to sound out the sentiments of the city as a whole, he forms an opinion on the basis of a number of "sly, snide remarks from the white spectators which had gathered there to see what was going on." Then he goes on to quote some of the derisive remarks that he heard, thereby giving to the public further inflammatory information at a time when there are many hotheads at the exploding point already.

As for Mr. Seven-Month Citizen of Greensboro, I challenge his good judgment and opinion as expressed in this letter, especially at this time.
