

Public Pulse

Blight On City

Editor of the Daily News:

No, Greensboro Resident, ("Is This Right?", Public Pulse, Feb. 8) it isn't right, but that doesn't keep most of the people in this city from feeling the way they do. And because the majority of their friends and neighbors share these views they don't mind in the least making such remarks in public. In fact they seem actually proud to do so. Perhaps they expect someone to pin a medal on them for extreme bravery.

I am ashamed of these people but they really aren't to blame. They were brought up on this diet of hatred and fear; and what is worse, they are feeding the same poison to their children and very little is being done to counteract this home training in our schools, clubs and civic groups.

The people I'm really ashamed of are those who did escape this brainwashing or survival in spite of it through some miracle and became prominent men and women, leaders in what could be the nicest city anywhere.

Why have they let such a condition exist for so long and when are they going to put a stop to it? Perhaps it takes more courage than any of us have today to step out from the crowd and dare to be different but if you do I'm sure you will receive some support from a small group who believe "that all men were created equal" and want to help wipe out this blight on Greensboro.

ABBIE WALTERS'

Greensboro.