

Democracy Shaky?

Editor of the Daily News:

I am a white teen-ager who is quite confused about one point in this so-called land of the free which stands for democracy.

Recently groups of young Negroes have been picketing certain private eating facilities trying to force the managers of these to allow them to sit down and be served.

I am a senior at the noble school of Senior High. I have been taught (and maybe misled) that every man is created free and equal and that the Supreme Court of the United States upholds this.

Is a man really free if he is forced by law from afar to have business transactions with someone with whom he chooses not to? I think the underpinning of democracy is getting quite shaky.
