

stick at. The deplorable conditions in Washington should make any lawmaker hesitate to pass integration laws.

We just don't want the Negroes associating with us to this extent. Let's face it. No amount of Scripture-quoting will cancel this out. Stop it now, and everything will be all right. Stop trying to juggle laws around and put our feet down.

"Stop It Now"

Editor of the Daily News:

I, for one, think it's about time everyone got straightened out on the segregation and sit-down issue.

In particular, I want to answer the question Karen Myles Leach posed in her letter to the editor, published Feb. 29. "If a white man was trying to gain a right, one would not condemn him. What's the difference? Color?"

Why people don't come right out and say it is beyond me. Haven't they got the guts? Yes, my friends, color is all the difference.

The white man simply does not want to associate with the Negroes. It looks like the Negroes would realize this and be guided accordingly.

If it's strictly a question of equal rights, I'm sure not a white person would care if Woolworth's built a three-mile long counter to seat the Negroes so they can get the type of food they so obviously crave.

The Negroes aren't after equal rights. They are seeking fraternization with the whites. The whites don't like it. They don't like it in New York, California or Miami. We still have time to stop this mess before it gets out of hand.

You can rest assured the people of the North are hoping and counting on us to preserve segregation. If integration at the lunch counter is established, then it moves on to the beer joints, then moves on the more trouble than you can shake a
