

Morals At Stake

Editor of the Daily News:

When morals in society are weakened, so is the country weakened. Morals are at stake in integration.

When Negro students attempt to invade segregated schools, libraries, movies, churches and lunch counters and other public places without consent or proper authority, they are doing it in an immoral manner to society and to their race. The heads of the Negro race should see a stop is put to the Negro students' invasion. It is only ignorance trying to enforce integration before you are educated. It takes years to educate people to integration and keep up morale.

State rights should be upheld and laws of the state, city and county adhered to. To be a good moral citizen, you should respect the laws of the state you live in and obey them.

RICHARD C. WALKER

Burlington.